The ACE Leadership Certificate is delivered in partnership with business schools at three of the UK's leading universities. They each satisfy ACE's learning outcomes but do so in different ways that play to their perceived academic strengths. They each offer a different choice of modular, part-time, flexible learning styles and approaches, at different costs, which are detailed in their individual prospectuses. This will allow you to select the course that fits best with you and your employer.

In addition, the courses draw upon the experience of people identified by ACE as leaders and experts in their field; people who faced and overcame real challenges in consultancy and engineering. The certificates are fully accredited as internationally recognised university post-graduate awards by our academic partners. They are also certified by ACE and come with the added assurance of the ACE brand.

To study for the ACE Leadership Certificate, you will need to be:

- a professional working in an ACE member company
- in a responsible position with at least three years experience in the consultancy or engineering sector
- professionally qualified in a relevant discipline (at chartered engineer, or equivalent level, or expecting shortly to become chartered)
- a graduate (or someone with significant management experience)
